Island Staples

The island doesn't care who's in charge. These classics have outlasted expeditions, occupations, and a few storms nobody talks about anymore – built the way they were meant to be, with better rum than you deserve.

Ahoy and welcome to what was – and what now is.

The Outpost belongs to the Black Tide. Whatever you've heard about this place, forget it. Whatever you think you know about who runs these waters – reconsider.

You'll find the drinks strong, the company tolerable, and the rum exactly where we left it after taking it.

Eat. Drink. Mind your business.
And pay no attention to the jungle.

If anyone asks who sent you – nobody did.

– Captain Mara Voss, The Black Tide
(What's ours is ours. What's yours... is negotiable.)

Outpost Signature Cocktails

The Outpost has changed hands. The spirits remain – rare, tropical, and sourced from the farthest reaches. What happens here now is nobody's business but yours. Or so they'd have you believe.

Lost Legends

Some of these recipes predate the occupation. Others were born from it. All of them are theatrical, unforgettable, and served without apology – this is the Outpost at its most dangerous.

Torchbearer's Grog 18

Maker's Mark, Planteray Dark Rum, Overproof Rum, & Tropical Juices

A ceremonial pour for the bold. Topped with an orchid and served with a bamboo backscratcher – some rituals outlast the hands that made them.

Smuggler's Reserve 16

Aged Rye Bourbon, Simple Syrup, Island Bitters

A forbidden recipe, lost in a storm-wrecked trade run and better left unfound. Sealed in a smoke-filled treasure chest.

Handle With Care

Wrath of Pele 50 (Serves 3-4)

They say the volcano god sleeps – until an offering is made. Rum, Brandy, and Gin meet Island Citrus and Almond in a 36oz smoldering bowl, crowned with a living flame.

Kraken's Embrace 30

Six arms. Six shots.

Legend says those who drink together from the deep are bound by its curse.

Coconut Rum and Blue Curacao

Served cold from the tentacles of the abyss.

Don't Let Go!!
